Hackensack University Medical Center Emergency Medicine

Volunteer Research Associates (RA) Program

The Emergency Medicine Department at Hackensack University Medical Center has available this NARAP program for science-oriented students to partake in innovative clinical research studies

Research Associates have the ability to engage with patients, participate in most parts of the research process, present research at academic conferences, initiate unique individual research, and become exposed to healthcare providers who are experts in their field. Research experience is invaluable for those applying to professional schools, as well as learning the tools to become an established researcher and the EM RA Program allows pre-health students this unique opportunity

ABOUT NARAP :

The Research Associate (RA) Program at Hackensack University Medical Center is part of a nationwide consortium known as the National Alliance of Research Associates Programs (NARAP). Within NARAP, emergency departments and colleges collaborate to conduct research in hospital emergency departments. Research Associates contribute by enrolling large numbers of participants and performing a variety of functions relevant to each study
